The entire indebtedness will not exceed $19,000, and the property, if sold under the hammer to-morrow would pay them off and leave a handsome surplus. He intends to return east in a few days and put his affairs in shape.

This morning about 3 o'clock, the restaurant of John Dreiblebise, at 270 Calhoun street, was entered by burglars. The "cracks" effected an entrance by cutting out a pane of glass. They succeeded in getting about $12 in cash, twenty pounds of fine cut tobacco and 200 cigars.

A conundrum presents itself to the mind of the reporter whether a night patrolman is obliged to take notice to a request to quell a disturbance when called upon, or whether he can send the party asking for his protection to hunt up the marshal, and in the meantime let the racket go on? ## CONVERSE'S CONVENTIONS.

Curious Coincidence: A Prediction Verified.
 Referring to the wreck on the Erieburgh last night, a curious coincidence is brought to light. It is a coincidence and nothing more, yet will somebody please rise and say so.

Yesterday noon F. B. Converse, train despatcher of the Pittsburgh, George Stevens, despatcher of the Wabash, and a SKITZEL reporter were standing at the south depot dining room entrance conversing on general topics, when the subject of accidents and wrecks was brought up.

Mr. Stevens remarked that there had been no wreck of any importance on the Wabash for a long time. Mr. Converse said the same thing of the Pittsburgh, but added, "There was a bad sign last night."

"What was it?"
 "Well, one of the boys dropped an order book on the floor."

Stevens and the reporter, looked mystified, when Converse continued: "You can laugh, gentlemen, if you like; there isn't a drop of superstition in my veins, but nevertheless I can't help feeling the least bit uneasy for the next twenty-four hours."

"Why?"
 "Well, during all the years that I have been in the despatcher's office, I have never noticed an order book fall on the floor, but what there was a wreck of some kind reported within twenty-four hours, afterward. Now just notice whether we won't have at least one truck off the rails before morning. I was not in the office at the time it happened last night, but when the boys told me of it this morning I said, 'Look out for breakers.' It has occurred time and again, and I have never known it to fail."

It will be noticed that the superstition, if such it be, has been verified. It is, of course, nothing but a pure coincidence; but no one will deny that it is a remarkably strange one.

Hugh Diehl escorted Lucinda Wallace to the south depot, last evening, and shipped her to Niagara Falls—or some other seaport.

CART-LOADS OF FUN

On Tap Yesterday Afternoon at Swinney Park.

Eighteen Females Play a Match Game of Base Ball.

Detailed Account of the Game.

The evolutions of the thirty-four foot snake in Jackson township, the bare faced audacity of a headless rooster in persisting in eating corn, the finding of a $175,000 girl at the Anderson House, and the familiar story of the cow jumping over the moon, are all matters of fact and history and without a source of unlimited astonishment and wonder, but all the above mentioned freaks of nature and other things sink into comparative insignificance, and their supposed brightness is nothing but a shadow compared to the celestial magnificence and dazzling splendor of the scene witnessed on the fair grounds yesterday. Many will remember the magic lantern of their boyhood days with its dissolving views, and chromotopes, which confused the eye and bewildered the brain in their eccentric evolutions, but imagine, if you can, the spectacle of twenty girls attired in an elaborate melange of red stockings, blue leggings, gilt stripes, vari-colored belts and the colors of the rainbow slung in promiscuous confusion, each uniform enclosing about 110 pounds of girl, and each girl with but twenty thoughts apiece, and each thought operating at the same time. We say imagine it if you can, and your imagination will present a wonderful spectacle, in which will be seen a profusion of flying hair, twinkling le-lower extremities, arms, balls, bats, shrieks, etcetera of infinitesimal life.

Such was the scene presented to the art-loving audience assembled at the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to witness the game of "base ball" between the Red Stockings of New York, and the Blue Stockings of Philadelphia. There were present on the grounds Kekiongas and amateurs, who were not only amused but instructed. The idea of throwing the bat at the scorer and then running directly for the second base, knocking over the pitcher in the way, never occurred to the professional player until introduced by the tars yesterday. A number of other strange and unaccountable freaks were witnessed by the spectators, which struck terror into their hearts and filled their souls with astonishment. Jay Phillips umpired the game, and was selected because he couldn't tell a base ball from a soda cocktail and never saw any game played excepting billiards and draw poker. He gave eminent satisfaction, and when a batter made a home run, the side was pre-emptorily declared out. Jay called the girls monkeys, and once, when the batter was hunting for a good club, he marked three strikes and an out, and wanted to declare the game a draw. He enjoyed everything, the girls and all, and the management enjoyed his umpiring, it was so remarkably free and impartial.

The game was called and the reds went to the bat. A little red shirted villain picked up a willow and said to the umpire "hip high." "Let's see it," said the umpire. "I want the ball hip high," he explained. "Well, who cares? You go ahead there and fire that leather through. And you batting monkey if you don't strike at it the first time you go out. You hear me?" The pitcher took the ball and then laid it down again. Then she rubbed her hands on the ground and wiped them on her breeches. Then she spit on her first two fingers and smelled the ball. Then she wheeled around and threw the ball at the second base woman. It passed about half way between third and second base and rolled out into the field. Then the fielders all ran up to the home plate, thinking the inning was over. The umpire explained that there hadn't been a ball pitched yet, when the captain gave Pat Conover a half a dollar to go and hunt the ball. The ball was found and tossed to the pitcher. She eyed it suspiciously a moment and then suddenly throwing her head back and her foot forward at the same time, she swung her arm around, brought it back with a jerk and let go of the ball, which made an air-line for the umpire's head, knocking the cigar out of his mouth and filling his eyes with ashes. "Foul, out!" said the umpire, while the pitcher was revolving around on her left heel like a gyroscope and presently tumbled over. As soon as she recovered the ball was sent back to her, when another sweet carmine nymph grabbed a stick, stepped up to the home plate and tapped a couple of times. Then, as the pitcher drew her arm, she swung her club over her shoulder with the air of a professional, knocking down the catcher in its wild career, then suddenly bringing it around again, she struck with such force as to carry her around a number of times, the bat knocking off the scorer's hat, and flying out of her hands, flew over the crowd and broke a buggy wheel just outside the field. She didn't stand on the order of going, but went directly for third base, and made a home run before she discovered that the ball hadn't been pitched, the pitcher having stopped to tie her shoe, the umpire decided that the run was foul and the player was out. When the third batter stepped up to the scratch it was evident to all that there was no foolishness there. After all the girls had fixed up their hair, the pitcher, with a "do or die" determination, thinking somebody was trying to steal to first base, threw the ball to that point. There didn't seem to be a correct understanding between the pitcher and batter on this point, as the latter, with bat upraised and hair streaming, made a rush for the first baseman and knocked the ball out of her hands and sent it sailing up into the air, in direction of second base. All the players of both sides made a rush for the ball, and the spectators were gratified by a spectacle of the most beautiful harmonization of colors, tights and thought ever seen. They seemed to have a single thought, and that was to catch that ball or die in the attempt. They almost succeeded—in dying. They came together with a rush that was terrific, and a pyramid of girls was raised in that vicinity that was only surpassed in its magnitude by the chorus of shrieks which issued from the pyramid. In the meantime, the ball struck on top of the pile and rolled off toward the home plate, where the umpire got it, placed his foot on the plate and declared the side out.

Everybody seemed satisfied, and the Blues went to the bat, and the way that little red pitcher went to work astonished the beholders. You may talk about Manning, Branding, Zetleip, or anybody else, but such beautiful under-hand, over-shoulder, double-twist, side-geared pendulum-swing pitching as was executed there was never witnessed before. She could hit that bat almost every time, and when she didn't hit the bat she'd hit something else—the umpire, the scorer, the third baseman, or a newspaper reporter—but something every clip. There was no mistaking her earnestness either, and when the Blues got in a run on her it was the fault of the umpire. Eight innings were played all in one day, and when the game was ended the score stood 20 to 11 in favor of the Reds.

The Gazette has discovered that a cemetery at Decatur has been entered.

The preliminary announcement of the Fort Wayne Medical College has appeared.

Charles Lancaster, is wanted at Ryan's office to give bail for surety of the peace.

Mrs. John Holland and son, of Terre Haute, are visiting with Deputy Sheriff Cosgrove.

Mr. and Mrs. Will La Bonta entertained the Qui Vive Club in regl style last evening.

Christiana Stegmeyer, of St. Joe township, died Monday, aged five years and seven months.

One hundred and twenty excursionists went to Rome City to-day with the Salem Church excursion.

Albert Maurer will, on January 1st, take a position as traveling man for a wholesale Toledo boot and shoe firm.

The programme for the concert tomorrow night is printed elsewhere. As will be seen a rare treat is promised.

Mrs. A. L. Griebel will go to Max-ucuckee Lake to-morrow. She will be the guest of Mrs. John Muehlfield, of Peru.

The Morgan & Beach burglars were bound over in the sum of $500 each, in default of which they were committed to jail.

The sheriff yesterday closed up the establishment of C. W. Rollins at Monroeville, on an execution in favor of David Shank.

Annie Throckmorton entertained a number of her friends on Ewing street last night, the occasion being the celebration of her seventeenth birthday.

Prof. G. P. Brown, of Toledo, and Hiram Hadley, of Chicago, both general publishing house agents, are registered at the Arville House as John Jones and George Smith, of Toledo. The question is whether it is a joke or whether there is not some kind of a "skeeme" behind all this funny work.

Hugh Diehl was just sinking into the arms of Morpheus, last night, when a knock at the front door startled his slumbers. He immediately arose, jerked on his pants—and his cousins and his aunt—and started for the door. He found a couple of the boys, who wanted him to take a ride, but Hugh said "No!" And he stole gently back to bed.

Silas M. Patterson, a son of Senator Patterson, of South Carolina, is registered at the Arville House. It is not known whether he bears any letters of introduction to prominent government officials or not, but it is safe to presume that he has a Palmer House board bill receipt in his pocket. He neglected to take it with him when he left the house, but it was in all probability sent after him.

Kinter, the German boy who was arrested with the other boys at Litchfield on suspicion of being the Morgan & Beach burglars, was at first thought to be entirely innocent of the charge, and was guilty only in being unfortunately caught in bud company. But recent developments have been made, and a prominent attorney interested in the case said this morning that he had good reason to believe that he was the ringleader of the mob.

Last night a quartette of Conover's friends tendered him an enjoyable little serenade, and after a short stay started to go to their respective homes. While driving up Calhoun street they sang several songs, and when near the corner of Calhoun and Lewis streets, Officer Roelle sprang into the street and catching the horse told them they must stop their noise and go home. The gentlemen are well known and have often delighted the people of Fort Wayne by their choruses in different musical entertainments. They were of course highly astonished at the bustling pomposity of the officer who so peremptorily ordered them to stop their noise and go home.

A. L. Griebel is in receipt of a letter from his brother H. W. Griebel, of Memphis, Tenn., who is at present encamped in an old log hut about 12 miles from Memphis. He reports that a large number of families, himself included, have taken quarters in low log houses, having neither windows nor floors. They spend the time in reading, playing cards, and anything that will relieve the monotony.

He further states that the fever is not so fatal nor epidemic as it was last year nor yet so bad as reported, a large number of cases reported as yellow fever being nothing more than a malignant type of malarial fever, while there were cases within his knowledge where the persons have died, and the attending physicians reported that it was actually fright which killed them.

AMUSEMENTS.
THE BERGERS AND SOL SMITH RUSSELL.

This distinguished and popular company of artists will give the opening performance of the season at the Academy of Music on Monday evening, September 1st. This most excellent troupe has steadily been gaining in the favor of our citizens, and on each of its visits to this city we find an increase in the audience. The company is organized for the present season in by far the strongest manner, and the Bergers have ever presented, and we notice by the programme that several new features and novelties will be presented. The following are some of the principal soloists and specialty performers. Miss Louise F. Kemlo, the popular mezzo-soprano; Miss Etta Morgan, saxophonist, the only lady performer on this instrument; Miss Marie Roller, solo violinist, late of the Vienna Lady Orchestra; Miss Emma Anderson, solo flutist; Miss Katie Hummel, trombonist; Louis F. Boos, the rising young cornet virtuoso, and the great and only Sol Smith Russell. This gentleman, so well known throughout the length and breadth of the land, stands confessedly at the head of his profession, and has long been recognized as the leading exponent of comedy in America. Mr. Russell has lately added to his already extensive repertoire some excellent new sketches, which he will present at the coming entertainment. The company consists of fourteen artists, and our amusement loving citizens have really a treat in store.

MUSIC IN THE AIR.

In the Neighborhood of Lafayette and Montgomery Streets.

How a Jealous Butcher "Made It Pleasant" for His Wife.

There was music in the air yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock in the vicinity of Lafayette and Montgomery streets. A butcher named Meyers, who keeps a meat market at that corner, arrived home about that hour in a state of bewildering intoxication and proceeded, without any unnecessary preliminaries, to "make it pleasant" for Mrs. Meyers. He began proceedings by knocking Mrs. Meyers down, then he danced a pas seul (as it were) about her recumbent form, and dealt her an off-handed in the face; then he performed some bewildering acts with the furniture, which he scattered and shattered and battered to his heart's content. The poor victim of his brutality was badly bruised up, and as he showed no signs of stopping the contest, she fled from the house, and took refuge with a neighbor. Meyers continued the performance until 10 o'clock last night, when a SENTINEL reporter visited his shop, and found him still on the war path. His wife had not returned. She is a good looking woman of about 35, and it is said that Meyers is afflicted with jealousy of her, which makes him very demonstrative when in his cups. The neighbors say he has no cause for jealousy. He was not arrested.

THE RAILROADS.

Engineer Charles Fenlon, of the Pittsburgh is convalescent.

Conductor Prendiville, of the Pittsburgh, is able to be out again.

Pittsburgh passenger train No. 3 was several hours late this morning.

Tip. Beals, the Pittsburgh engineer, has recovered from his recent illness.

Fifty-eight persons went with the Alert excursion to Niagara Fall last night.

Jas. Hight, conductor on the Pittsburgh, is lying, quite ill at his boarding house, 244 Calhoun street.

C. E. Gorham, general superintendent of the Pittsburgh, passed through the city on No. 2 to-day en route for Crestline.

Five new and elegant chair cars for the Wabash have just been completed at the shops in Toledo. Two more are in course of construction.

The largest excursion that ever passed over the Wabash to Niagara Falls went last night. The excursion was run in three sections, containing twenty-five cars, and over 1,000 people were aboard. The excursion came from points in the southwest.

Premiums have been awarded to the following engineers on the Pittsburgh road for the month of July: Through passenger, engine No. 122, I. B. Adams; through passenger, west, engine No. 124, F. B. Higgins; first premium, standard freight engine No. 115, John Cull; second premium, standard freight, engine No. 140, E. H. Rogers.

An accident occurred on the Pittsburgh road last night at about 10 o'clock near Pierceton, by which No. 6, due here shortly before 12 o'clock last night, did not arrive until almost 6 this morning. The accident occurred on No. 9, going west, and was occasioned by the breaking in two of the train and the hind end colliding with the front end. Three cars were badly wrecked, and a number of others thrown off the track, which occasioned the blockade. No one was injured by the accident. No blame can be attached to the management of the road, but it is about equally divided between the engineer and the conductor. The former should have watched his train and kept out of the way of the hind end, while the conductor should have noticed the break and held his end. The wreck was cleared away as promptly as possible, and trains are now running on time.

CART-LOADS OF FUN

On Tap Yesterday Afternoon at Swinney Park.

Eighteen Females Play a Match Game of Base Ball.

Detailed Account of the Game.

The evolutions of the thirty-four foot snake in Jackson township, the bare faced audacity of a headless rooster in persisting in eating corn, the finding of a $175,000 girl at the Anderson House, and the familiar story of the cow jumping over the moon, are all matters of fact and history and with a source of unlimited astonishment and wonder, but all the above mentioned freaks of nature and other things sink into comparative insignificance, and their supposed brightness is nothing but a shadow compared to the celestial magnificence and dazzling splendor of the scene witnessed on the fair grounds yesterday. Many will remember the magic lantern of their boyhood days with its dissolving views, and chromotopes, which confused the eye and bewildered the brain in their eccentric evolutions, but imagine, if you can, the spectacle of twenty girls attired in elaborate melange of red stockings, blue leggings, gilt stripes, vari-colored belts and the colors of the rainbow slung in in promiscuous confusion, each uniform enclosing about 110 pounds of girl, and each girl with but twenty thoughts apiece, and each thought operating at the same time. We say imagine it if you can, and your imagination will present a wonderful spectacle, in which will be seen a profusion of flying hair, twinkling le—lower extremities, arms, balls, bats, shrieks, etcetera ad infinitum ad lib.

Such was the scene presented to the art-loving audience assembled at the fair grounds yesterday afternoon to witness the game of base ball between the Red Stockings of New York, and the Blue Stockings of Philadelphia. There were present on the grounds Kekiogas and amateurs, who were not only amused but instructed. The idea of throwing the bat at the scorer and then running directly for the second base, knocking over the pitcher in the way, never occurred to the professional player until introduced by the tusslers yesterday. A number of other strange and unaccountable freaks were witnessed by the spectators, which struck terror into their heart and filled their souls with astonishment. Jay Phillips unpired the game, and was selected because he couldn't tell a base ball from a soda cocktail and never saw any game played excepting billiards and draw poker. He gave eminent satisfaction, and when a batter made a home run, the side was pre-emptorily declared out. Jay called the girls monkeys and once, when the batter was hunting for a good club, he marked three strikes and an out, and wanted to declare the game a draw. He enjoyed everything, the girls and all, and the management enjoyed his umpiring, it was so remarkably free and impartial.

The game was called and the reds went to the bat. A little red shirted villain picked up a willow and said to the umpire "hip high." "Let's see it" said the umpire. "I want the ball hip high," he explained. "Well, who cares? You go ahead there and fire that leather through. And you batting monkey if you don't strike at it the first time you go out. You hear me?" The pitcher took the ball and then laid it down again. Then she rubbed her hands on the ground and wiped them on her cheeks. Then she spit on her first two fingers and smelled the ball. Then she wheeled around and threw the ball at the second base woman. It passed about half way between third and second base and rolled out into the field. Then the fielders all ran up to the home plate, thinking the inning was over. The umpire explained that there hadn't been a ball pitched yet, when the captain gave Pat Conover a half a dollar to go and hunt the ball. The ball was found and tossed to the pitcher. She eyed it suspiciously a moment and then suddenly throwing her head back and her foot forward at the same time, she swung her arm around, brought it back with a jerk and let go of the ball, which made an air-line for the umpire's head, knocking in his eyes with ashes. "Foul, out!" said the umpire, while the pitcher was revolving around on her left heel like a gyroscope and presently tumbled over. As soon as she recovered the ball was sent back to her, when another sweet carmine nymph grabbed a stick, stepped up to the home plate and tapped a couple of times. Then, as the pitcher drew back her arm, she swung her club over her shoulder with the air of a professional, knocking down the ball hadn't been pitched, the pitcher having stopped to tie her shoe, the umpire decided that the run was foul and the player was out.

When the third batter stepped up to the scratch it was evident to all that there was no foolishness there. After all the girls had fixed up their hair, the pitcher, with a "do or die" determination, thinking somebody was trying to steal to first base, threw the ball to that point. There didn't seem to be a correct understanding between the pitcher and batter on this point, as the latter, with bat upraised and hair streaming, made a rush for the first baseman and knocked the ball out of her hands, and sent it sailing up into the air, in direction of second base. All the players of both sides made a rush for the ball, and the spectators were gratified by a spectacle of the most beautiful harmonization of colors, lights and thought ever seen. They seemed to have a single thought, and that was to catch that ball or die in the attempt. They all succeeded—in dying. They came together with a rush that was terrific, and a pyramid of girls was raised in that vicinity that was only surpassed in its magnitude by the chorus of shrieks which issued from the pyramid. In the meantime, the ball struck on top of the pile and rolled off toward the home plate, where the umpire got it, placed his foot on the plate and declared the side out.

Everybody seemed satisfied, and the Blues went to the bat, and the way that little red pitcher went to work astonished the beholders. You say talk about Manning, Spaulding, Zele, or anybody else, but such beautiful under-hand, over-shoulder, double-twist, side-gear, pendulum-swinging pitching as was executed there was never witnessed before. She could hit that bat almost every time, and when she didn't hit the bat she'd hit something else—the umpire, the scorer, the third baseman, or a newspaper reporter—but something every clip. There was no mistaking her earnestness either, and when the Blues got in a run on her it was the fault of the umpire. Eight innings were played all in one day, and when the game was ended the score stood 20 to 11 in favor of the Reds.

Prof. G. P. Brown, of Toledo, and Hiram Hadley, of Chicago, both general publishing house agents, are registered at the Avenue House as John Jones and George Smith, of Toledo. The question is whether it is a joke or whether there is not some kind of a "scheme" behind all this funny work.

Hugh Diehl was just sinking into the arms of Morpheus, last night, when a knock at the front door startled his slumbers. He immediately arose, jerked on his pants—and his cousins and his aunts—and started for the door. He found a couple of the boys, who wanted him to take a ride, but Hugh said "No!" and he stole gently back to bed.

Silas M. Patterson, a son of Senator Patterson, of South Carolina, is registered at the Avenue House. It is not known whether he bears any letters of introduction to prominent government officials or not, but it is safe to presume that he has a Palmer House board bill receipt in his pocket. He neglected to take it with him when he left the house, but it was in all probability sent after him.

Kinter, the German boy who was arrested with the other boys at Litchfield on suspicion of being the Morgan & Beach burglars, was at first thought to be entirely innocent of the charge, and was guilty only in being unfortunately caught in bad company. But recent developments have been made, and a prominent attorney interested in the case said this morning that he had good reason to believe that he was the ringleader of the mob.

Last night a quartette of Conover's friends tendered him an enjoyable little serenade, and after a short stay started to go to their respective homes. While driving up Calhoun street they sang several songs, and when near the corner of Calhoun and Lewis streets, Officer Roelle sprang into the street and catching the horse told them they must stop their noise and go home. The gentlemen are well known and have often delighted the people of Fort Wayne by their choruses in different musical entertainments. They were of course highly astonished at the bristling pomposity of the officer who so peremptorily ordered them to stop their noise and go home.

A. L. Griebel is in receipt of a letter from his brother H. W. Griebel, of Memphis, Tenn., who is at present encamped in an old log hut about 12 miles from Memphis. He reports that a large number of families, himself included, have taken quarters in low log houses, having neither windows nor floors. They spend the time in reading, playing cards, and anything that will relieve the monotony.

He further states that the fever is not so fatal nor epidemic as it was last year nor yet so bad as reported, a large number of cases reported as yellow fever being nothing more than a malignant type of malarial fever, while there were cases within his knowledge where the persons have died, and the attending physicians reported that it was actually fright which killed them.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE BERGERS AND SOL SMITH RUSSELL.

This distinguished and popular company of artists will give the opening performance of the season at the Academy of Music on Monday evening, September 1st. This most excellent troupe has steadily been gaining in the favor of our citizens, and on each of its visits to this city we find an increase in the audience. The company as organized for the present season is by far the strongest the Bergers have ever presented, and we notice by the programme that several new features and novelties will be presented. The following are some of the principal soloists and specialty performers. Miss Louise F. Kemlo, the popular mezzo-soprano; Miss Etta Morgan, saxophonist, the only lady performer on this instrument; Miss Marie Roller, solo violinist, late of the Vienna Lady Orchestra; Miss Emma Anderson, solo flutist; Miss Katie Hummel, trombonist; Louis F. Boie, the rising young cornet virtuoso, and the great and only Sol Smith Russell. This gentleman, so well known throughout the length and breadth of the land, stands confessedly at the head of his profession, and has long been recognized as the leading exponent of comedy in America. Mr. Russell has lately added to his already extensive repertoire some excellent new sketches, which he will present at the coming entertainment. The company consists of fourteen artists, and our amusement loving citizens have really a treat in store.

MUSIC IN THE AIR.

In the Neighborhood of Lafayette and Montgomery Streets.

How a Jealous Butcher "Made It Pleasant" for His Wife.

There was music in the air yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock in the vicinity of Lafayette and Montgomery streets. A butcher named Meyers, who keeps a meat market at that corner, arrived home about that hour in a state of bewildering intoxication and proceeded, without any unnecessary preliminaries, to "make it pleasant" for Mrs. Meyers. He began proceedings by knocking Mrs. Meyers down, then he danced a pas seul (as it were) about her recumbent form, and dealt her an off-hand in the face; then he performed some bewildering acts with the furniture, which he scattered and shattered and battered to his heart's content. The poor victim of his brutality was badly bruised up, and as she showed no signs of stopping the contest, she fled from the house, and took refuge with a neighbor. Meyers continued the performance until 10 o'clock last night, when a SENTINEL reporter visited his shop, and found him still on the war path. His wife had not returned. She is a good looking woman of about 35, and it is said that Meyers is afflicted with jealousy of her, which makes him very demonstrative when in his cups. The neighbors say he has no cause for jealousy. He was not arrested.
